DISTRICT SUFFRAGE

Synopsis of a Bill to be Presented to the House by Gen. Rosecrans.

The People to be Educated Up to the Necessities and Value of Self-Government.

A bill for the government of the District of Columbia by popular voice is being pre-pared by Gen, hosecrans, representative from California, and will be submitted to the house as soon as it is completed. A novel feature of the bill will be the term, "expression of

of the bill will be the term, "expression of popular preference," which is used instead of the words "voting" or "ballot."

Gen. Rosecratis was seen by a REPUBLICAN reporter last night in raterence to his proposition. He expressed himself strongly in favor of a popular form of government in the district. He characterized the present form sition. He expressed himsel strongly in favor of a popular form of government in the district. He characterized the present form of government bere as an "an anomoly in the United States. The bill now in course of preparation will start with the proposition that this should be a self governing district, the same as the rest of the country. Gen. Resocrans thinks that the proposed qualification of voters here should be thoroughly discussed by the citizens of the district before congress takes action. "Voters being trustees designated by law and bound to vote according to their judgment for the common weal," he said, "it is evident that the qualifications of these trustees should be so prescrited as to secure the greatest good to the greatest number. What qualification will secure this is a practical question for the lawnakers. The pocularities of the composition of this population, consisting of government employes and large numbers of needy seckers of employment, must evidently be an important factor in detertaining what should be those qualifications, and it will require nature deliteration by all who are interested in the wellare of the district.

The bill will provide that the district government consist of three commissioners, two of whom shall be elected and one appointed by the President. A perfect system of registration shall be established, and or that purpose the city shall be divided into registration districts of convenient size. In each of these districts there shall be a register book to be kept at his office for the Inspection of the public. He shall issue to each person whom he thus registers a certificate, and shall hear and determine all complaints against registered voters and all appeals for transfers from his district, or admission to registration within it. This shall be done under the prescriptions of law, which should also provide proper methods for securing a certainty of the registrar of voters. Another duty of the registrar of other will be to serve a notice on each voter in his registr tion district, within a time to be prescribed by law. The notice shall state this time of any coming primary or other election, and specify the officers for which nominations or elections are to be held. It shall also re-quest each voter to place beneath the name of the office to be filled the name of the per-son or persons he thinks most suitable to fill them. The voter shall sign his name to son or persons he thinks most suitable to fill them. The voter shall sign his name to the natice and place it in an envelope and scal it it will be called for by a collector of ballots having a scaled hallot box, who will receive and place the ballot in the box, giving the voter a receipt for the vote and placing his (the voter's) name on a stub from which the receipt was taken.

These collectors of ballots shall he duly swern and qualified to call on each voter in each district, within a certain specified time, for the purpose of collecting such ballots, to be called "initial expressions of public proference," The scaled boxes shall be taken to the office of the registrar of voters, where three or five inspectors of election designated by law, of which the registrar voters, where three or five inspectors of election designated by law, of which the registrar will be ex-officio one, will open the boxes and proceed to arrange and count the "expressions of preference" after the manner of counting ballots. The ballots and duplicate tally sheet shall be sealed and kept in the stehives of the registrar's office, and the certified returns, duly attested, shall be forwarded to the ditrict court.

The court will cause the returns from all of the registration districts to be consolidated, leaving as "scattering" what the law provides for, and publishing the result as "the official raturus of public preference," giving the names of the persons having preference for each officer with the number of preferences for each officer. A suffiing preference for each officer with the number of preferences for each officer. A sufficient number of slips, printed in proper form, shall be distributed to the registrars, who shall furnish one allp to each voter, accompanied by a notice of the time of holding the primary election to nominate persons for the office aforesaid, and informing them that they are at liberty to strike out and insert any names in the list they may see ill, and to use the names as a hallot to be voted at a primary election, which shall be conducted after the same manner, and the returns and count made after which shall be conducted after the same manner, and the returns and count made after the same manner and with the same precautions. This will familiarize the registrar of votes with the voters in his district and render illegal voting much more difficult. It will instruct the voters in the performance of their duties, making evident to them that they are trustees, and that the performance of their duties is of serious public consequence. It will secure much more attention to the husbress, and be much less expensive than the present system. The initial "expression of public preference thus obtained will be the present system. The initial expression of public preference thus obtained will be far more authentic than from printed or verbal assertions of interested partisans. The results of the primary election will be far more in accord with public opinion than the results of any convention. Having thus educated the public will of the expression of the will of the scheme. convention. Having thus calculated to public mind, the expression of the will of the voters by an election is prepared for. This election should be conducted upon the principles prescribed by law, and analogous to those propositions for obtaining initial and intermediate expressions of public preference.

The Late Rev. J. J. Suman.

The funeral of the late Rev. J. J. Suman takes place this morning from his residence, on Teach street northeast. The deceased was on Teach street northeast. The deceased was in the 65th year of his age. He was educated at Getrysburg. Fa., and after graduation entered the Lutheran ministry and labored in various fields in Virginia, Maryland, Feansylvania, and finally in Washington. During the war he was a chaplain in the United States army, where he contracted an illness which lamed him for life. For the past eighteen years he has been employed in the linited States treasury. He leaves a wife and seven children, three of whom are married, the rest single. The funeral will be conducted by Rev. Drs. Domer and Dielii. The Bridge at the Three Sisters.

The wording of the new bill recently in-troduced in the house of representatives providing for a new bridge across the Potemac at the Three Sisters, has given rise to considerable comment as to the expense the district would be liable to if the bridge is district would be liable to if the bridge is creeted. The bill provides that the district shall bear one-fourth of the original cost of creeting the bridge, but does not specify from what portion of the district revenues the expense shall be paid. The United States contributes to the rovenues one half of the whole amount, and both the people and the commissioners are in a quantary as to district would be liable to if the bridge is erected. The bill provides that the district shall bear one-fourth of the original coat of creeting the bridge, but does not specify from what portion of the district revenues the expense shall be paid. The United States contributes to the revenues one half of the whole amount, and both the people and the whole amount, and both the people and whether the United States will have to bear an equal amount of the district portion to the new bridge expense. The original cost of the new bridge is fixed at $220,000, and if the United States and the district are to bear one-fourth of it, there will be a differ-ence of nearly $25,000 on either side, according to the provisions of the bill.

HOW OUR FATHERS DID.

Senators' Accounts in the Early Days Docked for Lost Time.

Gen. McCook, secretary of the senate, yesterday sent to the public printing office for rebinding a book in which the record of compensation paid to senators was kept for ninety years. The earliest records are those of the first session of the second congress beginning Oct. 24, 1791, at Philadelphia. The latest are those of the session which expired on the third of July, 1881.

It appears that in the early days senators were not paid except for the time actually spent in session.

THE COLD WAVE.

A Fall of Forty-Four Degrees in Les Than Twelve Hours.

The balmy spring weather in this city yesterday morning was quickly succeeded during the afternoon by high winds and a rapidly lowering temperature. A chilling north wind set in by night and sent humanity shivering indoors, while it howled mournfully through indoors, while it howled mournfully through the caves and around corners. Several sign-beards were blown down, and any number of hats were blown off the heads of pedestrians and lost in the darkness.

The highest wind velocity in this city last night, as recorded at the signal office, was thirty miles an hour. The temperature at midnight was 17° above zero and still going down. The signal officer thought it would fall to 7° above before daybreak. Reports received at the signal office showed that the wind was unusually high on the seacoast during the night. The velocities ranged from 50 to 64 miles an hour. The temperature in the lower lake region was reported as down to zero at midnight. An old citizen prophesied that March would come in like a lion and, as the old saying relates, go cut as a lumb. Yesterday the maximum temperature was 51° above zero.

A False Presidential Prophet. To the Editor

You editorially comment on a statement that was given prominence in the first column of yesterday's New York Times, giving the views of some callow individual in regard to the position of New York state as to the republican nominee for the presi-dency. Mr. Arthur is only credited with the dency. Mr. Arthur is only credited with the support of eight counties out of the sixty that comprise the empire state. I, as a New Yorker, would like to inquire when each county had an even representation in the convention which nominates delegates to Chicago. Among the eight credited to Mr. Arthur are New York and Kings (Brooklyn). Now these two have nearly a third of the state's entire representation, yet are credited with no more strength than two of the smallest, one of which' indeed, is so sparsely populated that for legislative, judicial, and state purposes it is joined to another, the two state purposes it is joined to another, the two (Fulton and Hamilton) really forming one. This great prophet should join the ranks of other cranks who attempt to draw a horo-scope of matters that they never knew of nor never will. Their ignorance is fathoms deep in its density. C. FLEMING. in its density.

The New Race Track.
It is understood that Mr. J. B. Wiseman has sold his trotting horse Pansy, who has a record of 2:45, to a New York gentleman, and has purchased Primrose, with a record of has purchased Primrose, with a record of 2:35, from a stock farm in Kentucky. The new mare is said to be of fine breed, and will no doubt make an excellent reputation for herself at the races here this season. The trotting matinees, which became so popular here last year, will commence early in May, and some fast flyers will be introduced. The new track at the National Fair grounds will be completed in a short time. It will then be one of the best tracks in the country, It is to be a half mile track.

A Myrtle Street Social.

The Masons and Their Laborers. A meeting of the master masons was held at the store of C. G. Ball last night, and there was but a small attendance. The recent difficulty between the master masons and the laborers about the question of wages to be paid to the latter was discussed. The laborers have demanded an increase of pay, and as yet the question has not been determined whether the demand shall be granted, although it is understood that a compromise will be effected. The action of the meeting last night was not made public.

Emmett's Birthday. The members of the Clan-na-Gael of this The members of the Clan-na-Gasel of this city are making full preparations for the celebration of the birth of Robert Emmett. The event will be celebrated at Abner's hall on the evening of March 4. A banquet will be given at the same place on March 17. Quite a number of members of the organization rehearsed the new play, "An Unwritten Epitaph," last night at their hall. It is a portrayal of scenes in the trial of Emmett.

Col. Harker's Death. Col. John R. Barker, who was stricken with paralysis sometime ago, died at the residence of his brother, Maj. James Barker, 219 A street northeast, yesterday morning. Col, Barker has been employed in the coast survey for about ten years. He was about 60 years of age. He had for some time, before he was employed by the coast survey, been connected with the New York Grephic as a sketch artist. The funeral will take place to-day at 20 clock p. m.

GIDDY GIRLS.

How Two New York Society Belles Amused Themselves at the Liederkvanz

On the morning of the Liederkraux ball, two ladies well known in society beckoned a young man about town up to their coupe as it stood in front of Tiffany's. "Where are you going to-night?" one of them asked. 'Oh, out to dinner, and then I think I shall look in at the academy." "May we look in with you?" said the readlest of these ladies, both of whom are young, rich, and adorably pretty. Accordingly, proud in the conscious ness of escorting two of the belles of New York society to the Liederkranz ball, even under the rose, the young man arrived at the academy about midnight. The ladies were in black satiu dominoes, and so closely masked that their own mothers would not have known them. Once there they led their es-cort a dance, for they had written notes to at least twenty well known club meu, making appointments with each, and as they knew everybody and everything about them, these appointments with each, and as they knew everybody and everything about them, these missives were phrased in a manner calculated to pique the curiosity. The notes were nothing, however, to the little tele-a-teleson-versations that took place at the ball. Most of the men were as wild with curiosity as Dericourt, when Letitla Hardy bewitches him with her wit and poesy, incognita, "Who can she be?" was asked of each. The ladies flouted, teszed, and made the most personal and impertinent observations, so much so, in fact, that their escort was kept in mortal dread lest they should get into some row, it was the happiest hour of his life when he deposited them in their carriage. There men followed them to the door of the vehicle and tried to see if they could recognize the servants, whose conventional liveries afforded no clew. "Good night, Clarence!" cried one charmer to one of these irrepressible gentlemen. "It I were you, dear boy, I wouldn't call on Mrs. X.——again. She'll make it up with her husband one of these days, and between you and me, dear boy, she says that when you read 'Violet Fane' to her, your expression of countenance is too ridiculous. Cut it Clarence." Said the other filack satind domine: "Farswell. Pierre, farewell! When you get tired of sending violets every morning to Miss.—, think of me. They are my favorite flowers, and do get over that bad habit of yours of becoming confidential with every man in your club after dinner. It is all very well for a lovesick boy; but, Pierre, you are no longer young. Nevertheless, I like you, as a friend. Adicu!"

Star of Hope Entertainment. Star of Hope lodge, No. 12, gave a pound party last night at their hall, corner of Nineteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue. A large audience was present, and the literary musical programme arranged for the and musical programme arranged for the evening was much enjoyed. Instrumental music was rendered by Chambers lodge orchestra and Miss Carrie Brockfield; recitations by Mrs. F. E.
